

Fort Lee

Home to the George

Washington Bridge,

the historic town of Fort Lee,

NJ, is a diverse community with a population of over 35,000 people. Fort Lee boasts the fifth-highest percentage of Korean-Americans in the United States.

Fort Lee housed General George Washington's Continental Army as it retreated from New York and eventually through New Jersey during the latter half of 1776, before crossing the Delaware and surprising the Hessians at the Battle of Trenton-a turning point in the American Revolution.

Fort Lee is also considered by many to be the birthplace of the motion picture industry in America and as such, the Fort Lee Film Commission celebrates by organizing the Cliffhanger Film Festivals in the spring and fall.
