

Moonachie

Moonachie, one of 70 towns that comprise Bergen County, is home to approximately 2,700 residents. It was incorporated as a borough by an Act of the New Jersey Legislature on April 11, 1910.

Today, Moonachie is a growing community that serves as a gateway between the Northern and Southern sections of Bergen County. Although Moonachie has its own school districts for grades pre-K through grade 8, its high school is combined with its neighboring town of Wood-Ridge. The township also shares its first responder services with Teterboro Airport, which is in close proximity to Moonachie.
